The Appeals Committee shall provide the lawyer with a decision on the appeal within 60 days of receiving the application for appeal.

Criminal Certificates

Taxation of a criminal certificate will be done based on the following principles:

1. Only the services authorized by the certificate are covered.
2. The invoice from the lawyer must be received within 60 days of the conclusion of the services.
3. The certificate only authorizes services in Provincial Court.
4. Preliminary Hearings and King's Bench matters must be pre-approved by Head Office in advance.
5. Several expenses and services must be pre-authorized such as:
 - (a) Travel other than that for court appearances;
 - (b) Over-night accommodations;
 - (c) Judge and Jury, or Judge alone King's Bench trials;
 - (d) Professional Services (Expert Witnesses, Medical Reports)
6. With respect to 5(c) above, Section 28(7) of the Legal Aid Act sets out the requirements to obtain approval to elect to King's Bench.
7. With respect to 5(d) above, estimates from the professional service provider must be obtained and forwarded to Head Office before the provider is retained. The estimate must include ALL costs including the report itself, travel, accommodations, and court time, if required to testify, etc.
8. Any additional expenses which are not pre-approved are not paid.

9. Multiple Offences - The Commission may issue one certificate covering multiple offences, with the terms of that certificate being based on the most serious criminal offence charged, when a person is charged with multiple offences in relation to a set of events that are similar on some or all of the following characteristics:
 - (a) Date of alleged offence;
 - (b) Type of alleged offence;
 - (c) Location of alleged offence;
 - (d) Common purpose;
 - (e) Involvement of the same parties.
10. Disclosure - The first priority of counsel should be to request disclosure from the client/Crown and review same. Summary conviction offences generally take on average 1-3 hours depending of course on the number of offences, and the relationship of the offences to the criminal acts. Separate occurrences including several break and enter offences; multiple shoplifting charges or assaults would take longer than one event leading to several charges.
11. The seriousness of the offence(s) increases the volume of disclosure. Complex files may require many hours to fully review.
12. The more details provided with regards to the services provided increases the likelihood of full payment. Fees with limited details are often reduced as the lack of information does not justify full payment of fees.
13. Meetings with clients – Meetings are expected to occur after the lawyers have completed a review of the available disclosure. Typically meetings are as long as 1-2 hours depending on the file complexity. Reviewing the disclosure with the client, obtaining the client's position, discussing possible resolution and possible outcomes as well as the possible defenses to advance would be considered at this time.
14. Research on file – it is anticipated that the lawyers taking certificates have the basic understanding and experience with offences as most files are very common as to the evidence tendered and should require little research preparation. The extent of any legal research would generally be expected from junior lawyers. Reasonable cost for inexperienced lawyers is often covered to the same extent. For experienced lawyers, legal research is only covered for individual or unique issues which may arise. The research should be identified on the invoice including a brief explanation for the reason for the research.

When files are approved to the Court of Appeal the level of research is often increased based on the number and nature of the grounds under appeal on each individual case.

15. Appearances in Court – All reasonable time in Court is paid. It is common for pleas and adjournments to take one hour. A sentencing hearing that occurs in Provincial Court would seldom take more than two hours. If reasonable explanations are provided for why appearances exceeded the typical time frame, it will be considered and possibly permitted. Unusually lengthy trial time is occasionally taxed but only when the explanation for extended time is not disclosed.

16. Preparation Time – As a general rule, criminal cases that go to trial should have two days of preparation for each full day of trial. Obviously the time spent on reviewing the disclosure with the client should be included in that time but items such as preparation for crown witnesses and cross-examination, motions to be made at trial and any required legal briefs are included in this preparation time. Some of the motions made prior to trial such as bail reviews, charter arguments, stay motions will be approved. Frivolous motions will not be paid and some motions require approval from head office in advance. If approval is not given, the fees will not be paid. Ordinary or common applications such as *voir dire*s and other motions requested by the Crown are paid as the defense has no control of the application.

Family Certificates

Taxation of family certificates will be done based on the following principles:

1. Service:

	Time allotted*
Preparation of Notice of Application (73AA or 81A)	0.5 hours
Preparation of Notice of Motion (37A or 72U)	0.5 hours
Preparation of Motion to Change under Rule 81	1-2 hours
Preparation of Affidavit (or Responding Document)	1-2 hours average
Preparation of Financial Statement (72J) (client should complete most of this in advance)	0.5 hours

Preparation of hearing briefs	2 – 4 hours
Preparation of Court records (record on motion or record on Application) this is mostly admin work	0.5 hours
Court appearances	Based on Court time required
Research (must specify subject researched)	Up to 2 hours

 Time allotment can be adjusted based on experience of lawyer and complexity of file.

2. Preparation for Court appearance:

Depending on complexity of case and time in Court. For a one-hour motion – should be no more than a few hours given the fact that by then, lawyer has already met the client a few times, prepared an affidavit(s) and brief so should be very familiar with case by time court is held. For a multiple day trial matter, up to a half day to a day for each day of trial for court preparation is more than sufficient. The assessment of this depends on the complexity of the matter and taking into consideration that the lawyer should already be familiar with the case when preparing affidavits, pleadings and briefs... etc.

3. Meetings with client in person:

In normal cases, this would require one meeting with client to gather all information for pleadings (about an hour for simple cases or 1-2 hours for complicated ones) – then about one or two more meetings along the way to sign affidavits and provide updates on files until trial but updates on files should only occur if material changes need to be reported to the lawyer. A first meeting is permitted to be charged for up to 2 hours on average, but subsequent meetings should not be more than half hour to an hour.

4. E-mail/ phone call communications – with client or other party’s solicitor:

It is recognized that a lawyer must communicate with their clients in a timely manner. This does not mean that the client or opposing counsel are to dictate the terms of those communications to the extent that a lawyer must immediately reply to excessive and unreasonable volumes of communications coming either from a client or opposing counsel. In such situations, it would be expected that counsel manage the expectations of the client and/or opposing counsel in regard to when to expect returned calls-e-mails, etc.

Counsel who accept legal aid certificates are often directed to manage their client's expectations on a file both in regards to the merits and their conduct throughout the file. In the case of a frequent caller or communicator, clients must be advised that they are to gather their notes on the file and wait for a next meeting with their solicitor to discuss all developments that have occurred. It is expected that most of the relevant information regarding a file is gathered during a first and/or second meeting face to face with the client. All subsequent information required may be for the purpose of settlement negotiations or imminent hearings.

Other than if an emergency arises– all other communications must be controlled. If the use of emails/phone calls are judged to be excessive in a file, then taxation of these items may be assessed by allowing a time allotment for the work instead of permitting payment for each unit cost of the emails/phone calls charged.

Ex. if there are 150 emails charged at $8.00 for a total of $1,200.00 – then the taxation officer will consider how long it would reasonably take to deal with the various issues exchanged in these emails and give a time charge to replace all emails... ex- based on the information and the nature of the file – we would perhaps allow 5 hours in total of work to complete the work charged through the emails and therefore replace $1,200.00 to (5 hours x $70.00/hour) and allow only $350.00.

If taxation is exercised just on phone calls on an item by item basis– we usually permit two to three exchanges between client-solicitor per day but if daily for several days then it falls into category of excessive communications and could be replaced by a time allotment.

5. Child Protection Matters:

Most of the work required is for review of disclosure, preparation of Responding Affidavit, Briefs and preparation for and attendance at Court.

The taxation officer will consider time charged based on the average lawyer's charge in these cases. The taxation officer will also consider whether it's a three month custody, a six month custody or guardianship matter. In reviewing disclosure, the taxation officer will, for the most part, allow 1 hour/per 100 pages of disclosure. Lawyers must provide number of pages reviewed when charging time for review of disclosure. For trial preparation, 1 to 2 days of trial preparation may be permitted for trial depending on the length of the trial itself. Work related to preparation of Affidavits and briefs and meetings with clients and other management of the file will be assessed as provided above under legal services.

6. Disbursements:

Legal Aid will not cover the following disbursements as provided in the Mandate Letter to the client:

- (a) DNA tests to determine paternity
- (b) Psychological and/or social reports in child custody cases;
- (c) Medical reports
- (d) Any other expert reports or fees.

Photocopies will be limited to a max of 250 subjects to specific complex files in which case a higher number of copies may be approved.
